transfiguration
Posted by norman glasser - 23 Jan 2012 19:52

_____

I am fairly new at using the internet the terms that are used some I know others I don't. paranormal and physical science will never go togather inwhich I could care less. Most ofthe parapsychology In my words are parasites they make a living off others gifts A term I have used now for over a decade is transfiguration. That is one of the many gifts spirit has given me the ablity for spirit to show themselves in a transparent form over my body you can see the spirit I have used this as a healing tool for years for numerous people both rich and poor. When I started using the internet I thought this was common agmong the mediums but most don't have a clue. The ghost hunting programs well I will confess the last 60 days was the first time I watched them I have no time for tv. Are they interested in the truth you judge I contacted several programs and would pay for all my expencees and If no results would pay for their repersentive salary no takers.Pictures I will not give out pictures you have to experience it. each time that I do transfiguration it is a personal experience.It is their gift to you and not to be exploded. most of the time you will know the spirirt. Most of you out there won't beleive because it don't fit the so called normal, others will say you are calling up demons which is redidulous because I have seen numerous people healed example mother lost her only son in the war she was unable to sleep at night for over a year when she saw her son as spirit she found peace .I am ready to go among the wolves.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by Eclecticdealer - 24 Jan 2012 02:22

_____

Norman, my granddaughter was about 1 when we moved to a Brownstone in Brooklyn that had a activity. She sat in her crib laughing and chatting away. We asked who she was talking to she said "Demas (Sp?) and Goomas (Sp?). We would go for a walk and she would wave to the tree outside the house saying they are waving to her. Her light went on by itself, toys were in different places, etc, none of which she could do while in her crib.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by norman glasser - 24 Jan 2012 02:33

_____

I wish them success, for me its a personnel life journey to make me a better human being and to share the spirit of giving and love.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by crystalcross - 24 Jan 2012 03:05

_____

Norman,

Absolutely no need to apologize, you did not offend. I just wanted to highlight that not all books are printed from the same plate. Its all good, I respect what you do very much.

And I think the reason we all look for proof, or evidence is to allow those who can not see the spirits the opportunity to get a glimps at what you see.

==========

Re: transfiguration

Posted by LeslieAValentin - 24 Jan 2012 05:48

_____

Hi Norman,

Nice to have you here at GnH. I'm sorry I haven't had a chance to chat yet with you.

As for your forum topic...

First, I do not see how you could have offended anyone in any way...

I think many relate the term "transfiguration" to when Jesus ascended and becomes radiant on the mountain. However, I do understand what you are saying as well.

While I do not have that particular gift, but then again, have never explored that side of things to be honest; I have to agree with Tress when she said that no a lot of people have heard of it.

What I have seen over my time here as well as in other forums, are people who are either just learning about abilities; questioning situations that are happening; having a need to "belong" somewhere, etc. And, then there are those of us who have been around for a while actually working with gifts and I must also remind that each person has different strengths and weaknesses; levels of an ability. And then, there are folks who for their own reasons are drawn to the paranormal in interest. There is a great "melting pot" of souls here at GnH.

I would love to hear more on the subject from your perspective.

Hope you have a great evening and a fantastic tomorrow.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by norman glasser - 24 Jan 2012 16:56

_____

Its to bad that we can't keep that part of our minds open. I have wondered if the story of Adam and Eve really isn't the story of lost innocense. and we have to experience it in some way.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by norman glasser - 24 Jan 2012 17:27

_____

people have always tried to seek me out my wife and I make one public appearence in Baltimore each year and its exhausting.I would like to find someone with a respected reputation to doccument I never thought that it would be that difficult to find someone and I'm just about to give up searching.

==========

Re: transfiguration
Posted by Steven Matrix - 24 Jan 2012 18:22

_____

norman glasser wrote:

people have always tried to seek me out my wife and I make one public appearence in Baltimore each year and its exhausting.I would like to find someone with a respected reputation to doccument I never thought that it would be that difficult to find someone and I'm just about to give up searching.

One possible way of documenting your experiences is with a still camera. Spirits can and do appear in photos. Just my 2 cents.

==========