Wires moving on their own?

Posted by BHPI Josh - 01 Nov 2011 14:12

Alright folks, here's another video we have. This was taken at a private residence in a basement. The footage you see is obviously of three wires/cables that are hanging down from the ceiling. The camera is a game camera, commonly used by hunters to more or less stalk game at night. It's set to start recording when sensing motion. The wires are on the left. This is another clip we have tried to debunk very heavily. We walked and ran by the wires, stomped around upstairs, opened and closed doors, anything we could do to recreate. When we did attempt to recreate, we couldn't get the wires to move at all. The very interesting thing about it is that they tended to move independently of each other in the clips. None of our investigators noticed these wires moving. Depth perception is tough in this video, but the wires are actually within a square of un-floored basement about 10ft x 10ft. We couldn't walk over there, we could go around, but not on that section. Bizarre would be the best description we have for it.

==========